How Collateral Co. Was Robbed First Details of the Conspiracy Company Sues Ex-President Cobb

MARIE LE CLAIRE, WHOSE NAME WAS USED IN LOAN

OUTSIDERS VICTIMIZED BY PLOTTERS

One Scheme Was Based on the Overvaluation of Pledges and Sale of Tickets.

The complete "inside" story of the conspiracy to rob the Collateral Loan Company by juggling the diamonds and other valuables in the vaults of the company, and the scheme to victimize outsiders by selling overvalued pledges, is here told for the first time.

Developments of yesterday added to the complications of the company's affairs.

The Collateral Company filed suit against former President William Cobb, claiming that the articles taken from Cobb at the time of his arrest were the property of the company.

The company also filed an attachment for $500 against Captain Albee C. Armstrong, of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, who arrested Cobb, to hold him responsible for these articles and to prevent their return to Cobb.

The police, in turn, refused to give up this property, which consisted of some $500 in money and certain securities, value not given, to Cobb.

When Cobb's attorney, Joseph Denison, called at police headquarters late yesterday and demanded the articles taken from Cobb he was refused.

The Grand Jury will convene tomorrow and District Attorney Fletcher will then decide what witnesses are to be called. It is expected that the entire clerical staff of the loan company will be summoned.

HOLD CONFERENCE.

Director Charles F. Curtis conferred with Assistant District Attorney Lavell yesterday, and later A. J. Orem, of Sharon, with whom Cobb is said to have conducted stock transactions, also conferred with Mr. Lavell and Inspector Ellis. Walter Orem is reported to have given the entire details of his business with Cobb at this conference.

Attorney Denison said last night that Cobb had left town for a few days but that he would return, and he would offer his services to assist in untangling the affairs of the loan company.

The story of the juggling of the pledges and the sale of the overvalued securities has nothing to do with the charges against Cobb. Cobb was released yesterday afternoon on $125,000 bail after spending two days in jail on the charge of larceny. Cobb's alleged offense is based on stock transactions while the conspiracy deals with theft by repledging securities for loans and swindling outsiders by the sale of tickets for overvalued pledges.

Yet this juggling act of the Collateral Loan Company—the directors now live in the neighborhood of $30,000. The thefts continued for a period of at least five years. And not only the loan company, but many outside persons suffered heavily as a result of the work of the conspirators.

It is one of the dramatic features of the case that President Cobb, now facing a grave accusation, might have gone unaccused indefinitely had he not set out an investigation into the thefts. In the course of the investigation an understanding of the company was questioned. This man remarked: "If you don't look for the fellow higher up?"

REMARKED TO CHARGE.

And that remark led to the discovery of facts upon which are based the charges against Mr. Cobb.

The system by which outsiders were victimized was based upon the overvaluation of articles presented to be pledged.

The system required, it is believed, at least two men in the loan company's offices and an indefinite number outside. One of the men on the side had to be connected with the sale of valuing articles for pawn, and the other had to have knowledge of the books. The men outside were jimmies in the various transactions.

In addition to the weak spot at the appraiser's department, the conspirators took advantage of another fact. This second was the high market value of a pawn ticket from the Collateral Loan Company. This value was estimated at $100 a ticket, and a pawn ticket, said yesterday to be

DOOR IN LIFE OF CHILDERN PRISONER DEEPLY MOVED

Pathetic Farewell Between Cooper in Death House at Charlestown.

Baby Climbs Bars to Give Condemned Father Last Caress.

A suite of a boy shinned childlike up the bars of a death cell at the Charlestown Prison yesterday afternoon, and peering his face between the steel of the cell door said:

"Daddy, I love you."

And "Daddy"—Daniel J. Cooper, who is doomed to die in the electric chair this week for the murder of his neighbor, Alfred D. Bradish of Upton, leaned forward and gave the boy the kiss.

It was not only the first time a child has been admitted among the death cells at the prison, but it was the first time any visitor ever gave a condemned prisoner a caress.

"What's that?" said Cooper. "It makes me feel good to see you."

The little boy followed this up immediately.

"Don't turn in to see me, Daddy?"

But the grated steel door didn't open.

PATHTIC MEETING.

Little Chester went to the prison with his mother and his brother, Herbert, who is fourteen, and his sister, Bertha, who is ten. Chester is the "baby" of the family. He is chubby, can't talk much, but is unusually bright for his years. He and his mother were the first to enter the room with the death cells on either side of it. The other two children followed an hour later.

Chester ran forward with a cry of delight at seeing his father. He put his arms around his father's neck and began climbing as boys climb a pole. When he was halfway up Cooper leaned over and gave him the kiss.

After the lad had slid down to his mother's feet Cooper leaned still further over and kissed him twice more through the bars. With the permission of Acting Warden Allen he kissed Mrs. Cooper and shook her hand warmly.

Little Chester looked curiously about, never realizing what cell and bars and door to the death chamber meant.

Mrs. Cooper talked with her husband in low tones, took so low that neither the guard, Warden Allen or Rev. W. Bradley Whitner, Cooper's spiritual adviser, could hear. Later the wife said she and her husband had discussed home affairs chiefly.

CHILDREN WEEP.

"But I did most of the talking," she said. "He told me his chief regret was that he must leave us destitute with no money to look out for us. He did not refer to the charges against him or the sentence of death. But he felt it deep down in his soul. I can't believe they will kill him."

Herbert and Bertha, the other two children, were admitted. Both sobbed when they saw their father. They were told it was probably for the last time. Cooper seemed overcome, too, but he did not shed any tears.

The parting an hour and a half after mother and "baby" entered was even more sad. Mother and children are mourning the loss of their father. Cooper kissed them all over and over again. Then he turned his head back and wept.

The guards made a lot of Chester and Father Murphy, the Catholic chaplain, rode him baby-horse on a chair. Just before the family left the prison, Father Murphy took up a collection in the office. This netted $1.50.

As it happened, Mrs. Cooper was without funds to pay the train car fare back to Upton, and the collection came in handy.

After being treated to a dinner of roast beef and chicken and low cream by Rev. Mr. Whitney, the family left Tuesday morning—his counsel, John E. DeWitt, who was the father's lawyer, and Governor Walsh said yesterday that he was still fighting the case against Cooper.

Thoung Cooper has been told there was no hope for him and that he was turned out of the prison Tuesday morning—his counsel, John E. DeWitt, who was the father's lawyer, and Governor Walsh said yesterday that he was still fighting the case against Cooper.

"MY TEN CHILDREN TAKE FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE," says a sign of 120 Lincoln St., New York City, which says that the late Dr. J. C. DeWitt, who was the father's lawyer, and Governor Walsh said yesterday that he was still fighting the case against Cooper.

RUSSIAN Claim Great Lodz Victory

ALIEN FORCE FIGHTING ON GERMAN SOIL

Aviators Drop Bombs

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Austro-German union is being hammered both from the east and from the west on its own soil.

While the Russians are assailing East Prussia's borders and successfully penetrating Austrian territory, the French are carrying the fighting into great force up to the outer works of Metz, while menacing "his country south of Strasbourg" with cannon and aerial bombardment.

No advance has been made in the fighting on the western front that the storm center of the battle is longer in France than in Belgium. The Germans are being waged at the extreme tip of the line stretching from the Belgian border to the Belgian coast.

It is in Alsace and in Belgium that France is fighting her fiercest fight. With the aid of her allies she is making notable progress on both fronts, despite all the efforts of the Kaiser's army to weaken the fighting in the eastern battle line.

ADMISSION BY DEER.

While the French war office is silent on its operations around Metz, Berlin admits officially that the French have been forced to defend their fortified position there against French attacks, which the German war headquarters state were repulsed.

Berlin also makes official claim to advances in the territory southwest of Altkirch, where the French war office asserts its troops have made progress. It is very probable that both statements are credible because the nature of the country in which the fighting is proceeding lends itself to alternate progress and retreat.

Regarding the French assertion that General Joffre's army is making gains against the German line at Alsace, the French war office asserts its troops have made progress. It is very probable that both statements are credible because the nature of the country in which the fighting is proceeding lends itself to alternate progress and retreat.

BOMBS DROPPED BY FRENCH.

From Berlin comes the report that French aviators dropped bombs on Freiburg, Breisgau, in the Grand Duchy of Baden, forty miles south of Strasbourg and eleven miles from the Rhine.

At Colmar, also forty miles from Strasbourg, but in a more southeasterly direction, according to a Swiss unofficial report, the French had been within nine miles of the city and on the church, for purposes, the dispatch says, of tempting the French to come to fire on their fortified structures, thereby emboldening the residents against France.

No terrific loss of men and munitioning in upper Alsace that the boom of the guns has been heard at Basel and other points on the Swiss border. The battle of the greatest proportions on this front is continuing around Altkirch and the French are making gains.

Engagement was precipitated when German forces moving on Belfort were met and engaged by French troops sent to strengthen the army which began the attack on the frontier near the Swiss border. The fighting was carried to the outskirts of Muehlhausen and on to Altkirch, where the French were defeated.

Heavy fighting is reported in the center of the line, where the French are still engaged, the outer ring of fortifications. Owing to the vigor of the defense they have been unable to make much progress since three weeks ago when they were within nine miles of the main line of fortifications, but the success of the attack and the heavy loss of the French army.

BELGIAN BATTLE IN POLAND Russians Claim Great Lodz Victory

Terrific Fighting Continues in Poland; Kaiser in Bomb Parli at Breslau.

GAINS CLAIMED BY ALLIES

A Petrograd message received in Paris last evening says the great battle of Lodz in Poland, described by many correspondents as the most sanguinary engagement, not only of the present war but of all times, has terminated in a brilliant victory for the Russians, who have captured great numbers of prisoners and guns.

The Germans, however, are, according to the latest reports, beginning a new battle, along a line extending roughly from Kutna, in the north, to Cracow, in the south. The right, or southern wing of this army, which rests on Cracow, is commanded by General Dautz. It is reported on the north by the army under General Huttenlocher, which is based on Breslau, while the western army which was sent from the west is the gap between this force and General Mackensen's army, which after extracting itself from the main position, is now in a new position extending from Kutna southward. The eighth East Prussian army presumably has taken up the northern part of the line.

According to all accounts, the German army that cut its way out of the Russian trap in Poland was well nigh cut to pieces in the process.

A German corps, which was engaged near the railway junction of Koloski, made the line between Lodz and Lodz, says the Petrograd correspondent of the London Star, "made an splendid, furious bayonet charge, through which about 12,000 men escaped."

Those fought their way through Breslau toward the remnants of the German army, which was engaged near the railway junction of Koloski, made the line between Lodz and Lodz, says the Petrograd correspondent of the London Star, "made an splendid, furious bayonet charge, through which about 12,000 men escaped."

Austrian correspondent, describing the same engagement, says: "Heavy German forces which had penetrated to Tarnobrzeg were surrounded and obliged to fight their way off to Lodz to unite with the main body."

"The Russian escaped counter attack after a desperate battle to prevent the capture of Tarnobrzeg, but the German army cut a passage of the point of the bastion for a distance of fifteen miles."

"This battle is called the bloodiest and most pitiless fight of the war. Ninety per cent of the German officers were put out of action and many prisoners had been taken. The Russian lost thirty-four thousand. The Germans lost twenty-four thousand."

The fighting is now in a new phase. The German army has been driven back to Lodz, and the Russian army is now in a position to attack the German army.

BRITISH DRIVE GERMANS BACK IN SHARP BATTLE

PARIS, Dec. 5.—Field Marshal Sir John French, after his brilliant victory followed up the official visit of King George to the trenches of his fighting forces by a brilliant and daring offensive today, which the Germans were driven back all along the British front from Dinan to the Yser.

North of the Yser the British charged from their trenches at daybreak and fell pell mell upon the German first line earthworks, sweeping up and into the face of the terrific fire. The French drove down among the Germans with arms and bayonets, and the German soldiers were driven back to their trenches.

GIVE A BASKET! ALL-STAR CAST TO APPEAR IN BIG XMAS BENEFIT

Big Theatre Entertainment and Tammany Club Ball to Add to Fund.

A great, all-star theatrical benefit, to aid of the AMERICAN "Give a Basket" Fund to provide Christmas dinners for Boston's poor, will take place in some large local theatre. The date will be announced soon. This announcement adds another and very important date to the month-long charity calendar created by this fund. The calendar is made up of the charity activities for the next fortnight or so whose proceeds will be devoted to the "Give a Basket" movement.

To date the calendar runs thus: Wednesday evening, Dec. 9—Metropolitan Ball, Casino Club of Boston; Monday afternoon and evening, Dec. 14—Benefit, American L. of Petit Triangles, No. 239 Boston street; Wednesday evening, Dec. 16—Boston Public Library ball at Tammany Club of Ward 17 in Symphony Hall.

Date to be announced—All-star theatrical benefit performance.

LEADING ACTORS TO APPEAR

The theatrical benefit will offer a splendid bill to the audience because arrangements are already being made for the leading vaudeville and legitimate actors, who are booked for Boston engagements during the week to appear to aid of the "Give a Basket" Fund.

Some, who are in the city now and who are scheduled to be here that week have offered their services, and the spirit and warm generosity which characterize their professions. The benefit program is made possible through the co-operation of the Boston Theatrical Managers' Association, which has many times aided the cause of charity in this manner.

Details of the program will be announced later. But enough is arranged now to assure the public of an unusually attractive entertainment. Clever vaudeville acts will be featured. It is expected that the program from leading plays will be presented. Altogether a program which will compare well with any ever presented in this city, which is famous for its elaborate theatricals.

The theatrical benefit is figured as one of the most attractive ways of raising money for the "Give a Basket" fund, as it is the Tammany Club and other assemblies, in a delightful way to be joyful and charitable at the same time.

MEET THE CALL OF THE POOR

However, many do not dance. But who does not care for a well-arranged theatrical program? Buying a ticket for the benefit will help the charitable dinner plan for Boston's poor and will give the buyer between two and three hours of clever entertainment.

But tickets are already on sale for other big benefit features in aid of the "Give a Basket" Fund. This refers to the Pro Boston Public Library ball at the Tammany Club of Ward 17, which is to take place on Wednesday evening, December 16, in Symphony Hall.

Not only are the tickets on sale, but they are selling with a rush. Proof of this is found in the fact that yesterday Mayor Curley forwarded to the AMERICAN a first installment of $100 from the advance sale of tickets. This makes a total of $1,200 turned over to the "Give a Basket" Fund.

HENDRICKS CLUB BUYS 100

Considering that the ball is ten days or nights distant, the eagerness for tickets may be all the more realized. Tickets are going in blocks. The Hendricks Club, Martin Lomas, secretary, has just received a large order for 100 tickets at the same time. Theatricals and moving picture shows are buying tickets in lots of twenty-five to fifty and are advertising the Tammany ball with posters in the lobby at the same time. Between this and the benefit they are to give on the afternoon of the twenty-second, the football boys are doing a great deal for the fund. Actors always were big-hearted and open-handed and probably always will be.

You can buy tickets for the Tammany Club ball at Mayor Curley's office, 100 State street, or at the office of the club or at the AMERICAN office, No. 30 Summer street. The tariff is one dollar, and remember that all the profits from the ball go right into the stomachs of Boston's poor Christmas Day, via the "Give a Basket" plan.

Maybe you don't dance. What if it that won't make your dinner less plentiful. You don't know whether Martin Lomas can do for you, or not, but that isn't interfered with Martin's club from buying one hundred tickets, has it?

Now all the "Give a Basket" enterprises, with its benefit dinner, theatricals, and direct cash contributions, and its gathering of the "Give a Basket" fund, is a feature of the grand, united Christmas celebration which the AMERICAN is planning for Greater Boston. Another big and elaborate feature will be a series of special Christmas dinners, to be given at the City Hall, for six evenings leading up to and concluding with the Christmas Eve celebration. These dinners will be held on Sunday evening, will be repeated on Christmas Eve, and will be held on Christmas Eve, and will be held on Christmas Eve.

The AMERICAN will defray all the expenses of the Christmas celebration. None of the money contributed to the "Give a Basket" fund will be used for the tree festivities. With much order of one dozen a large portrait. MAKE APPOINTMENTS NOW FOR YOUR CHRISTMAS PHOTOS.

MARSHALL SEES NO CAUSE FOR U. S. TO WORRY OVER WAR

"Europe Busy," Says Vice-President, Who Is Silent on Gardner Resolution; Defends Lectures

United in the opinion of the President and the Vice-President, the United States has no cause for worry over the war in Europe. This was the opinion of the Vice-President, who was asked to express his views on the Gardner resolution, which calls for a declaration of war against Germany.

Mr. Marshall, who is a member of the Council of War, said that the United States is not in a position to take any action until the war has been declared. He said that the United States is not in a position to take any action until the war has been declared.

REDUCE COST OF MANUFACTURE

LINCOLN HIGHWAY MAKES ITS REPORT

Willys-Overland Company, by the Use of Waste Products, Materially Decreases Expenses.

The desire to which what waste products are utilized in large manufacturing establishments is surprising to say the least. It is the fact that all of these products are utilized. Many a large plant is able because of the extent of its operations to thus reduce manufacturing costs as compared with operations performed on smaller scale.

In the Toledo plant of the Willys-Overland Company, at Passaic, N. J., the departments alone save $100 per year by using coal for the fact that this large saving by utilizing the waste products of the plant is of interest but the mechanism by which it is accomplished is an excellent example of the utilization of which a large plant is able to do.

To operate a Willys-Overland drop forge plant, in which there are 200 steam hammers, and to utilize the waste products of the plant is a task of no small magnitude. It requires a large amount of fuel, and a large amount of power. It is a task which is accomplished by the use of waste products of the plant.

The waste products of the plant are utilized in a number of ways. One of the most important is the use of waste products in the manufacture of the plant. The waste products are utilized in a number of ways.

Oldfield Breaks World's Record

On the Corona, Cal. track in the race of Thanksgiving Day, Barney Oldfield drove over 300 miles at an average speed of eighty-five and one-half miles an hour without a stop. This was the world's non-stop speed record and another victory was placed to the credit of Firestone tires.

Four hours of incessant grinding over a high crowned track at Corona, Cal. was enough to virtually burn up a tire. In fact, out of twenty engines, Oldfield was the only driver who was not compelled to stop for tire changes.

The constant strain, at enormous speed, made the tires practically a mass of fire. But it is only one of the several drastic tests through which Firestone tires recently have been put. In the recent Los Angeles-Phoenix road race the celebrated Barney Oldfield, Firestone tire came in first, second and third, and in the same time, Firestone tires won first, second and third place in 1200 miles of unrequited mountain and desert racing also put tires to unprecedented tests.

Cubs on Still Hunt for Good Second-Sacker

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—Negotiations for a second baseman to strengthen the Cub infield will occupy the attention of Roger Rosenbaum, newly-appointed manager of the Chicago National League team, for the next few weeks, until the problem is solved.

Rosenbaum found thirty-five players who under contract of reservation to the Cubs, and after a thorough examination of the dozen landed him by President Thomas expressed the opinion that with a crackling guard of the keyhole seat added to the visible supply of Cubs he would win the National League pennant.

The new team answered positively that Hein Zimmerman would play third base.

"That's his position and that's where I will play," said Rosenbaum. He intimated he might shake up the rest of the team.

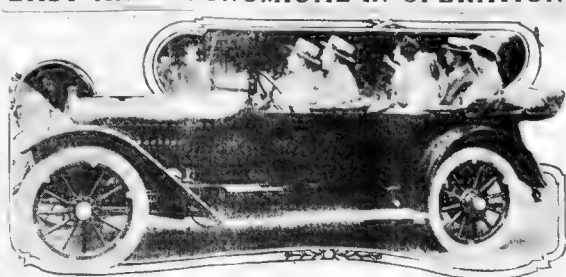

Brothers Rivals for Football Captaincy

PART LANSING, Mich., Dec. 5.—Michigan Agricultural College football fans, while lamenting the passing of Captain "Carp" Julian, who made his last football fight for M. A. College, Penn. State, are centering their attention upon the probable prospects for 1915. And the situation is not lacking in interest.

Two brothers, Alvin and Hewitt Miller, are the candidates, and they are about the only men whom the Aggies are considering for the captaincy.

Incidentally, neither of the two is seeking captaincy, and each would like to see the other pick the plum.

Firestone Smashes Another World's Record

300 Miles Without a Stop at an Average Speed of 85½ Miles an Hour

THAT is the wonderful record of Barney Oldfield on Firestone Tires at the famous Corona, California, Race Thanksgiving Day.

It is by far the greatest non-stop record on any road or track in the history of motor car racing. Think of the terrific heat—nearly four solid hours of the relentless grinding at this tortuous speed. Twenty cars were in the race, but Oldfield was the only driver who did not stop for tire changes.

Firestone TIRES

—less than three weeks previous to the Corona Victory—got the First, Second and Third honor in the Los Angeles-Phoenix Race and First place in the El Paso-Phoenix Event. These two races, known as the "Cactus Derby," put tires to a grueling test of over 1200 miles of unrequited, rough mountain trails and burning desert sands. Here all nature's wildest forces were encountered, but Firestone, already World Victorious, stood the test by winning these, the greatest road races ever run.

This constant piling top of victory upon victory, year after year, is significant.

The world of Firestone is built upon Firestone Tires—the sure and trustworthy of safety and endurance. The reason is in the making of the abundance of good rubber and the careful selection of the best rubber and the exclusive method of Firestone master workmen.

For your safety and saving, every day, you should demand Firestones—

TO materially reduce the cost of an upper class motor car and at the same time practically double its serviceability, is an achievement that almost staggers belief. Yet this very thing has been accomplished in the new two-door Kissel Kar.

KISSEL KAR

Every Inch a Car

A fully equipped regular sized manufactured automobile of liberal dimensions and high grade construction throughout is now within your reach at $1450. A comparatively small additional sum secures for you the advantages of a detachable top by which this car can be changed at will into a luxurious Sedan for winter driving.

The Kissel Kar is priced at a figure hitherto unknown for a manufactured car of regular size, real comfort, and enduring quality. The service value has been just about doubled by the invention of a practical detachable top, enabling the owner to switch from a car that is a complete car in the summer to a car that is a complete car in the winter. A Seasonable and Sensible Gift

What gift could be more appropriate and more appreciated than a beautiful brand new Overland Coupe?

Give one of these handsome cars to your wife or daughter and you'll make it the happiest Christmas of her life.

The Overland Coupe is an ideal all-year-around car.

In winter it is as cozy, comfortable and warm as a costly limousine; in summer, with all windows down, it is as cool as a touring car.

In any season, it is the ideal car for shopping, for theatre parties and for calling.

It is just as convenient as any electric; just as handsomely finished and appointed; just as easy to drive yet it costs you considerably less money.

It comfortably seats four people.

Your wife can drive you to business; use it herself all day; then pick you up when the day is done. A chauffeur is unnecessary for the convenient electric controls make driving simple. The clutch pedal is easy to operate; the levers are within natural reach and work freely.

Any woman can drive this car.

If orders are placed immediately, deliveries can be made any day or hour you stipulate.

MANY NOVELTIES IN BODY DESIGN AT COMING SHOW

The Makers Are Planning Great Things for Opening of 15th Annual Motor Show in New York.

Many novelties and improvements in body design of motor vehicles will be displayed to the general public at the opening of the motor show in New York the second day of the coming year.

No transition from one season to another has revealed such marked changes in the matter of equipment, accessories of detail, new lines in design, as well as rational changes in the design of the new season. While many of the new designs have been already seen, a number of cases the new models already have been described in newspapers and trade journals. Among the surprises in design were several new cars equipped with eight-cylinder motors.

Almost equally startling are several of the new small four-cylinder cars, which, it is said, will sell under $1,000. In observing many of the new bodies on late season's cars it will be noted that features as a whole are covered up as to the design, somewhat more than in the old cars, and to prevent appearing prominently, but at the same time avoid the danger of tire striking the fender on a sharp rebound after passing over a bump.

Great development will be noticed in smaller coupe bodies. In fact, the change has increased in popularity each successive season, and this will be more noticeable in the new introductions in seating arrangements, especially in closed models. It will be seen in the majority of exhibits, and that while not a new way, it is new in the way it is used, or being used in a new way. Not only have large cars such as limousines, berlines and heavy touring cars improved greatly in appearance, but very light cars have been much refined in beauty and utility.

Car Deliveries Made in Trainload Lots

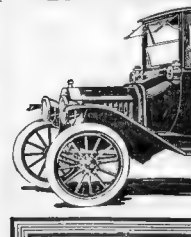

It is an inspiration to hear Motor Manager R. H. Harris of the Motor Car Company talk of the success of the company in the delivery of cars in trainload lots. He says that the company has always been in the habit of shipping cars in trainload lots, and that this method has been the most successful in the history of the company. Balanced Lightness —the thing that counts on roads and winter upkeep bills

And what does "balanced lightness" mean? A car that gives you BETTER service on the road and costs you LESS to operate—that's all.

You know, of course, that excess weight is expensive. Likewise, lack of balance. And so you can appreciate what the Studebaker engineers accomplished when they cut the weight of this Studebaker SIX to 2860 pounds and at the same time made it STRONGER and better BALANCED.

They gave it balanced lightness. They cut the cost of upkeep—the cost of tires and the cost of fuel. They made it a car that's easier to drive, a car that steers at the touch of two fingers and a car with marvelously improved road qualities.

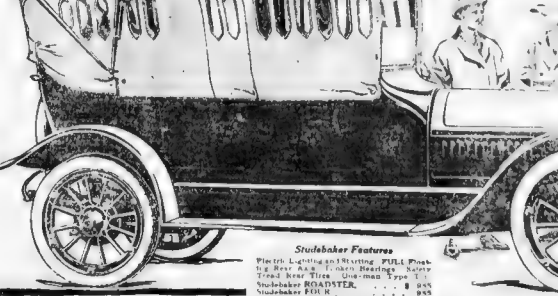

The close-fitting top and stowaway curtains that give you a closed car's protection in a minute's time, and the over-measure of power that this LIGHTSIX of all Light Sixes has, make it the ideal car for winter driving in town and Boston.

And with its dignity of design and its elegance of finish, this Studebaker LIGHT SIX is one of the handsomest cars you ever saw. Your eyes will tell that. But the BIG thing now is to rule, to drive it and to KNOW what a Studebaker "balanced lightness" means. Come in—we'll welcome you to it.

A Guarantee of Boston's Prosperity

One guarantee of Boston's prosperity for all time is its location and facilities as a port. It is a day nearer the great seaports of Britain and northern Europe than New York. This means a great saving in time and fuel for steamships. Boston has a good harbor, and the development of its docking facilities has only been begun. Its foreign commerce is growing. For the first ten months of this year, coastwise and foreign business combined, the gain was more than 41,000 tons, although the foreign war caused a retirement of foreign maritime business all along the North Atlantic coast. Germanic ships being kept off the sea for fear of submarines. The foreign trade of Boston is enormous. From the date of this year until November 20, its imports amounted to $102,000,000 and its exports $84,500,236, a total of more than $200,000,000. The business of Boston as a port insures the reality value of this city and its suburbs. It adds to its population, and that creates a demand for more houses. It calls, as it increases, for more warehouse accommodations and for transportation development. It provides an army with work. Moreover, it makes Boston an attractive site for manufacturers who sell goods abroad. When the war is over there is sure to be a great increase in Boston's foreign trade. This will first be felt by increased valuation of land near its harbor, especially in undeveloped sections. Of late years there has been a rise of realty values in its new sections. That will continue, but extension of the sea trade of this city is bound to have an enhancing effect upon all land near the ocean. Foreign commerce was Boston's original source of wealth. An old shipmaster of this city was wont to say, "The waves will bed gold ashore."

The Mysterious Disappearance of Hope

Latham At Last Explained And A Pathetic Romance Is Now Revealed

WHEN Miss Hope Latham, ready to rise to stardom above the dramatic horizons, vanished from Broadway view there were different conjectures by New Yorkers. This was two years ago.

"She has tired of the stage and gone into a convent. You know she was always deeply religious," said one who claimed to be her best friend.

"You know she studied medicine before she went on the stage. Maybe she has gone West to practice," said another.

"She was brought up on a ranch in Canada. Maybe she has heard the call of her country."

"She made one trip around the world. She may be taking another."

"Or she may have tired of America and gone back to Europe. She had lived there for five years."

"Her uncle was Supreme Judge of Manitoba. She may be practicing law."

Every guess was a wrong one. A backward light was cast upon what had been the darkness of her disappearance by an unexpected piece of news from Kingston, N. Y., last month.

"Harry Sheppard Coykendall died last night, leaving a widow, Mrs. Coykendall, before her marriage, was Hope Latham."

The mystery of the sudden and complete disappearance of Hope Latham was explained. And behind this brief announcement lies the story of a very unusual and a sadly pathetic romance.

Hope Latham had left the stage for love. She had married a man who hated the stage and detested everything and every person pertaining to it save her. There had been a long war between love and ambition, and love had won.

In her black robe of widowhood she sat, her sombre eyes fixed upon the Hudson sweeping in a lovely blue length almost at the foot of her garden, and told the story of her mysterious disappearance and the tragedy which had brought her name and personality once more to the surface.

"I met Harry Coykendall at a little social gathering in New York. He seemed to me a very clean, fine, lovable character. But I did not fall in love with him. I had only one love—my work. I had never been in love with a man. I did not expect ever to be."

"Three months after we had met I asked him if he had seen the play 'Seven Days'."

"Why should I see it?" he answered. "I understand it is a noisy, common affair. Why do you wish me to see it?"

"Because," I answered, "I am playing in it."

"He was shocked. His face was pale, his voice unsteady. 'I never dreamed you were an actress,' he said. 'You are so totally unlike those people. You look so different. You behave so differently. And your name—you were introduced to me as Miss Louise Brega.' And so I am," I answered. Hope Latham is my stage name."

"He had fallen in love with me by that time, and the thought that I was an actress was torture to him. He tried to forget me. But he couldn't. And slowly I came to realize that I cared a great deal for him. At first I couldn't see why I couldn't serve two loving masters, my husband and the public. I did not realize that he could not be happy to travel about the country with me. I thought that would be delightful. He didn't. We talked it over, and after each discussion we were more and more unhappy."

"There were three years of this uncertain state of mind and unhappy state of heart on my part. Then I secured what every actress wants—a play of her own and the dignity of being a star. But the voice of love called and called. Ambition called, too, but not so loudly. I should have been happy. Instead I was miserable. I could see my name blazing above a Broadway theatre.

"But I could also see the figure of the man I loved going out of my view forever. Friction in the conditions helped me to my decision. The two authors of the play quarrelled. The air was full of explosives and reeked with hatred. Up the river, only three hours away—but it seemed worlds away—an honest, loving man waited for me. I fled the stage for Kingston."

"And never, not for one moment, have I regretted the change. 'Are you sure, honey, you don't long for the theatre?' he often asked. 'No, dear, no,' I answered him honestly."

"And I told the truth. In Summer I filled those hours when I did not have my husband with me with my garden and my birds. I knew the rotation of the flowers. I knew the habits of the birds. I had ten little wren houses built out there, as you see, on the lawn, and they were always filled. Every morning I went out to the edge of the garden and coaxed the birds to be fed. And every day I sat out on one of the rustic benches on the grounds and coaxed the flowers to grow. In the Spring and Fall we went to a camp in the Catskills. My dear husband was one of the solitaires of this world. While he was a bachelor he used to spend many months every year in the woods. After we were married he enjoyed taking me there, and it made him happy that I liked the woods too. We would stand on the peak of a mountain and he would point down the valley to where the smoke spirals curled up from the city, and he would say:

"How beautiful this is, and how hideous that. Here all is peace. Down there they struggle, struggle, struggle. And for what?"

"In the Winter we would wander through the South, taking our time dawdling through the sleepiest parts of the Gulf towns."

"But my husband seemed to think that at all seasons the evening was the best. When half-past seven came he would say anxiously, 'Dearest, are you sure you don't feel the call of the theatre? Don't you long to put your war paint on?'"

"I would answer, 'No, indeed, I don't, dear.' He would sing and I would accompany him. Or we would read together."

"And I had him. Remember that when you ask me if I did not miss the stage. I had him. Well,

I have had twenty months of a perfect love—nearly two years of an absolutely happy life. Who has had more? I am a fatalist. I believe that what is to be will be. When our time comes to go no one can lengthen our stay by a second. I have stored away a handful of beautiful memories. A friend said to me, 'God gives us happiness that there may be sunshine in December.'"

"I think I shall have to go back to the stage. My life is empty without him. The stage work is the work I know."

A strange feature of the idyllic romance is that because her husband wished it Hope Latham dropped utterly out of New York view when she departed for her honeymoon in the woods. After their quiet marriage, which no one suspected, because her stage name did not appear in the notice, they lived at Kingston, and she took up the life of her husband. No one of their associates ever suspected that she had been an actress. Some of her friends of Broadway never knew of her marriage. Three women not of the stage, who had been her chaperones during their wooing, knew she had married, but did not know where she lived.

Strange, too, is the will that leaves the widow, though the daughter-in-law of a multimillionaire, without fortune. Old Samuel Coykendall, desiring to keep his fortune intact, provided by the terms of his will that his widow and children should receive a life income from his estate, but that it should not be divided until after the death of his widow and the death of the youngest child living at the time of her death.

With the quiet house on the bank of the Hudson, the amount of life insurance left by her husband and, as she put it, "a bit of her own," the widow might continue her quiet life in a modest way. But she complains that her life is empty. When life has been emptied of love it must be filled with work, she says.

Queen Wilhelmina and her German Husband Humiliated

Far-Seeing Dutch Statesmen, Fearing the Fate of Belgium, Warn the Queen to Mind Her Own Business and Make Her Mecklenburg-Schwerin Consort Virtually a Prisoner in the Royal Palace

Amsterdam, Nov. 20.—The many people who have suffered in this way, the Queen has been most deeply humiliated is Prince Henry, husband of Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland.

Prince Henry's sufferings have not been heroic. He has been kept prisoner in his wife's palace, and on the whole, to communicate with his German friends and generally treated as a passive character by the court of his adoption.

The Queen's consort was born a Princess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and his father is the reigning Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, a sovereign of the German Empire. Prince Henry was trained as an officer in the German army and still holds honorary rank in it.

The Dutch have long felt that their powerful and growing neighbor, Germany, was a danger to them. Holland has the doubtful advantage of holding the mouth of the River Rhine, which flows through Germany.

A large element of Dutchmen once fled to England as their friend, but the war was so serious and dangerous that the British enthusiasm.

Even the invasion of Belgium by Germany came and gave them a worse shock.

Queen Wilhelmina Before Her Marriage to a German Prince

The Royal Palace at the Hague in Which the Prince Consort Has Been Practically Confined as a Prisoner by the Dutch Cabinet and War Minister.

They realized that they had missed the safe late by only a few feet and that some other "necessity of state" would, in the future, very likely compel the Germans to do the same thing to them.

Queen Wilhelmina informed the cabinet that the "necessity of state" would, in the future, very likely compel the Germans to do the same thing to them.

The Dutch mobilized their entire army of 200,000 men, and the invading belligerents, and look every step to prevent their neutrality. It cost them 1,000,000 guilders in 1914, and the Dutch have to meet with money, but they will do nothing to preserve their independence.

In the midst of these anxieties and Dutch navy, and a general in the Dutch army.

A meeting of the Dutch cabinet was held to consider the Prince's conduct, and prompt action was decided on. The Prince was requested to meet the cabinet at the War Office. The Prime Minister, Mr. De Vries, informed the Prince that he must cease his visits to the German officers because they were contrary to the orders issued by the government.

"Then we shall be obliged to deprive your highness of your rank in the Dutch army and navy," replied the Prime Minister coldly.

"You are insulting me," roared the stout Prince.

He would be forced to obey the laws of the country and the orders of the government.

"We must have your highness's promise now that you will not again visit the quarters of German officers. In order that I may give the necessary instructions in our office," replied Colonel Bosboom.

The Prince refused to give the promise, but he did not leave the room. He was kept in the room for several hours, and then he was taken to his quarters.

When he went out his movements were carefully shadowed by secret service men. By all these precautions the Dutch have reduced the Prince to a state of perfect neutrality.

Queen Wilhelmina has also been impressed with the necessity of respecting national feeling in these matters. Holland is a small country, and the Dutch are very sensitive to national feeling.

How to Care for Birds and Make Them Comfortable

A TOMATO CAN makes a first-class bird house if fastened to a tree or the side of a barn. All that is necessary is to cut a square piece big enough for a door out of one side, near the end that is to be the top—leaving one side of the same size, and, however, so that the piece of tin can be turned around at right angles, to make a shelter above the doorway and keep the rain off. If the can is fitted over the top of a tall pole it will not need any other bottom. Weeds and bluish dirt readily occupy such houses, which ought to be placed in shady spots, because the bright metal becomes very hot in the sun.

This is one of a number of ideas suggested by the Government Biological Survey in a book it is soon to issue about "Bird Houses and How to Build Them." The publication is designed to attract attention in architecture for certain feathered creatures which it is deemed desirable to attract to the immediate neighborhood of human dwellings.

The practice of erecting bird houses with this end in view is becoming rapidly more popular all over the United States and, as one reads it, he has been found that many species of birds hitherto deemed intractably wild can easily be persuaded to become companions of man. A few years ago only four species were commonly regarded as house birds—the house wren, the chickadee, a tree toad and the martin. Since the movement to protect birds and make neighbors of them began, however, their numbers and needs have become better understood, and it is expected that, as the requisite facilities are supplied, and as the number of birds hatched in houses increases, it will be practicable to invite the company of these feathered friends with increasing success.

At all seasons birds may be gathered about human dwellings by offering them what they need. In winter they are fed with bread and butter, and in the summer, if supplied, they will report daily at the lunch counter. On the other hand, in summer they prefer to forage for themselves, and other means must be sought to attract them. They appreciate fresh water for bathing and drinking. A shallow pool, if only a foot across, becomes an hot day's center of attraction for all the birds in the neighborhood. It may be provided with a pan set in the ground and containing a few pebbles.

Birds are desirable not only on account of their beauty and song, but because of their usefulness as destroyers of harmful insects, especially during the breeding season, when they are obliged to work early and late to obtain sufficient food for their nestlings. If feathered birds of war or two are scattered about a place, they can rear their young comfortably most of them will be occupied with the house. In the Southern States have long been made in very simple fashion out of gourds, a hole on one side serving for a door. A piece of wire tertain the most shrewd the requisite means for attaching the gourd to a tree branch or elsewhere. A number of gourds thus prepared and strung on a pole serve to make a satisfactory apartment house for colonies of martins, and singly, they are equally well adapted to wrens and bluebirds. While not durable when exposed to weather, they are easily replaced.

Ordinary wooden boxes, if chosen, can be made into bird houses by merely nailing on a cover and cutting out an entrance hole; but such makeshifts are rarely weatherproof and never pleasing to the eye. Branches containing real woodpecker holes, when obtainable, are perhaps the best attraction that can be offered most house birds in the breeding season. By carefully fitting such a branch to a fruit tree or shade tree its foreign origin makes no so far disguised as scarcely noticeable.

Builders of artificial houses generally go to the woodpecker for design, and by varying styles to suit the tastes of different kinds of birds are rewarded by such tenants as chickadees, tufted titmice, white-breasted nuthatches, Carolina wrens, violet green swallows, crested flycatchers, hermit owls, sparrows, hawks and even some of the woodpeckers, the master builders themselves. Red-headed and golden-fronted woodpeckers are willing occupants of artificial houses if properly constructed. Some birds are satisfied with almost any sort of lodgings. Thus bluebirds and wrens are content to build in tomato cans, but crows and nuthatches disdain such contrivances. Wood is a better building material than tin, and the entrance holes should be cut into the outside to exclude rats. Heads of nails and screws should be a railing deeply and covered with putty. All houses should be easy to open for cleaning, and a small entrance hole should be cut into the side of the entrance to make it possible to reach the interior.

Another important factor in the construction of a bird house is the location. It should be placed in a quiet, secluded spot, and the entrance hole should be cut into the side of the house, not the top. The house should be placed in a quiet, secluded spot, and the entrance hole should be cut into the side of the house, not the top.

Winter Fashions By Lady Duff-Gordon

"Overall"
Gown

Velvet,
with Bash
of Citron

By Lady Duff-Gordon.

TWO seasons ago I was telling you how amusing the colored furs and wigs were. This season they are among my firm "don'ts," so I like in Dame Fashion No "tricks" this season, and you the fact that Paris is no longer our "Mecca" is in no way responsible for the return of our beautiful, whole some brown, black and gray pili. I present here today two all fur coats, a leopard and a broadtail, or broadtail. The former is a square useful garment, with belt buckled and a good warm collar of skunk. The latter is for town wear, and is really most charming.

You must not fail to notice its long waisted coat, with a long skirt of fur belted from one side and around the back and buttoning under the right

A dear little soldier gingham with a tiny paradise of tate de nevre shown with this coat in the picture. I consider one of the smartest hats I have ever made.

Next to fur is, of course, velvet, and what colors now has one to choose from! Every season when seeing my new collections I feel it impossible to better them, and every season as it comes surely surpasses the last by leaps and bounds.

Just look at the little dress pictured on the right. It is in a striped velvet of purple and blue, with a band of skunk and a collar of lace. Around the neck should be worn one of the "conty" fur "neck muffs" I spoke of last week.

A curious garment is the one in blue velvet shown above. It is cut all in one piece, with a hole to slip the head through. "Overall" is the only appropriate name for it, and for many women it will be found most becoming, with its saak of citroubrocade and a facing of green velvet. Skunk again appears in this coiffe muffs, neck and hat.

To have a fur wrap entirely and exquisitely different from just the ordinary fur coat to the smart woman's great ambition at the moment. And, always supposing that she be possessed of a goodly amount of money to spend on the new possession, her desire can be quite easily and most fully realized.

For, though it is late in the season now for the appearance of new models, some different and distinctive way of manipulating furs seems to be managed and disclosed every day. There is, to begin with, the coat, which is not a coat, but a very cleverly contrived combination of coats and court mantle.

models a special suppleness being, of course, a primary consideration and necessity. And in some cases a trimming and a contrast of skunk will be provided, while in others black or "blue" or smoked fox will be the chosen finish, it having been very wisely decided in the case of these somewhat extreme but very graceful styles to keep to subdued color

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Luncheon" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion. Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-ninth street, New York City.

schemes—inwardly as well as outwardly, the linings being of some actively patterned and subtly shaded crepe de chine, with, perhaps, a few shimmering threads of gold or silver interwoven here and there in some of its scrolls or blossoms. Night blue and black and silver will be thus brought together in the lining of a broadtail coat, while the soft tones of mole skin will be repeated in a crepe de chine on which a cobweb tracery is wrought in gold and silver.

And as to the actual make of the coat itself—a band of skunk will, for instance, be fastened closely and costily about the neck, and the broadtail will then button down the centre, above and beneath a swathed waistband of black panne, the sleeves to their turn being finished off at the wrists with a band of the contrast fur.

That their armholes extend to the waist line is a detail which they share in common with any number of other and more ordinary coats, but, of course, this arrangement facilitates considerably the transformation of sleeves and coat at the back into a seamless, straightly hanging cape, deeply bordered and weighted into position, too, by a band of skunk.

Stud fasteners are attached to this drape, so that it may be manipulated in several different ways, one corner, for example, being drawn round to the front and caught up on the left hip, while it is also possible—and more protective—to fasten its folds together all down the left side.

The more eccentric and careless looking the effect the more successful and smart it will be considered, the one thing to be remembered and managed being to have one side of the fur bordering caught up above the other. It would be quite a fatal fault if the two were accurately joined together, as at one time was considered necessary and inevitable.

Another new wrap, modeled on somewhat similar lines, is in very fine quality mole skin, the front part of the coat actually terminating at the waist, but the much lengthier back drape being so contrived that it can be drawn round and fastened high up in front, in a way which at first entirely conceals its divided and distinctive characteristic. And there is this further advantage about the novel scheme, that it enables the folds of fur to be even more closely drawn inward at the back and upward in the front than would be possible in any other and more ordinary way. So, for that reason alone, there would, of course, be a special demand for the new creation, inasmuch as the new curve—rude people might call it a "bulge"—in front is being cultivated by every woman and in every possible and impossible way.

Another new creation in broadtail has a long cape back, whose full folds are broadly bordered with stranded skunk. But this wrap will not be popular, I think, because it has no collar to furnish a becoming background for one's neck.

How Two Scientists Had the Same Dream at Once.

By Dr. Leonard Keene Hirschberg
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

PROFESSOR H. C. STEVENS, of the great University of Washington, a scientist as well as a philosopher of the first order, gives the scientific world an account of a strange phenomenon.

In telling about this event Professor Stevens says that on the first night of August, last year, he and Mr. R. Karver, another unprejudiced observer, were at the Puget Sound Marine Station, Whidbey. With a third man, Mr. D. H. Wenrich, they had been sleeping in a tent which was erected upon a wooden platform. Their tent was one by twelve feet and the platform twelve by fifteen feet square. The walls, which were boards about four feet in height and of the same size as the tent, were topped by a framework of roof, over which the tent was stretched.

The ground upon which this tent-hut was built was a steep, rocky hillside about one hundred feet from Washington Sound and somewhere over fifty feet above the water. Numerous delicate fir trees filled in the foreground between the front of the tent, which was always open day and night, and the Sound itself. The growth of the trees, however, could not be said by any manner of means to be dense, and patches of blue water were always visible through the open door from the interior of the tent, even when the campers were lying upon their cots.

The hillside upon which the tent was pitched was very steep. The front of the tent had thus to be supported upon posts about ten feet in height and five or six inches in diameter. At the right front and at the left rear and the platform was in close contact with thriving fir trees. One of these, growing at the right, was something like sixteen inches in diameter, and the other on the left was about twelve inches in diameter. The cots of Professor Stevens and his two companions were arranged parallel to the longer stretch of the tent, and their heads were pointed toward the back of the tent, very close to the wooden wall.

Dr. Karver occupied the left cot and Mr. Wenrich with this Professor himself occupied the other two, with the latter on the right. Mr. Wenrich was between the two scientists, and was not subjected to the strange experience of the other two philosophers and biologists.

They always slept soundly, but on this particular night Professor Stevens had the strange experience of suddenly awakening at 1 a. m. He sat bolt upright in bed with an uneasy, creepy feeling that the whole tent and platform were afloat in the water, drifting gaily and gracefully among the trees. The bright light of a full moon cast dark shadows of the trees all about the tent and illuminated brilliantly the water of the Sound. So persistent was this manifestation of motion that the Professor could not rid himself of it. Meanwhile, what was his surprise and astonishment to find that Dr. Karver, too, was sitting bolt upright in his cot and staring out of the tent just as he was doing? Without Professor Stevens saying a word to Dr. Karver, the latter began to tell how he, too, had suddenly been awakened at 1 a. m., a most unusual happening. Here are his very words.

"I felt the tent rolling slightly, I felt the tent and bed floating forward. I sat up in bed, looked out of the tent door over the water. The trees immediately in front of the tent seemed approaching quite rapidly, due to our floating, and I felt some anxiety as to our safety, wondering how to avoid a collision with the trees. I called out, 'Where are we?' I heard Professor Stevens exclaim 'Ho!' and I noticed him also sitting up in bed. He immediately jumped up, ran to the door and looked out. In the meantime I felt somewhat relieved, thinking that he might guard against a collision. They both then arose from their cots and walked out the front of the tent, and, lo! the strange manifestations which they had both independently experienced vanished. They were upon the solid earth."

The great interest and peculiarity of this situation lies in the fact that two scientific, scientific laboratory workers, independently of each other, experienced exactly the same strange phenomenon. They were both wide awake, and yet neither influenced the other by speaking which each had indicated what they were both experiencing. Here, then, for the first time in the history of science, religion or literature, you have proof of an illusion experienced at the same time, in the same place, by the separate living minds of two sceptical, unprejudiced laboratory scientists.

PLENTY OF POOR AT HOME—MR. GOODMAN

If you have money to give, give first to your brother, and then to your distant cousin across the ocean. If you have more than you need to take care of the poor around you, next door and across the street, then send THE SURPLUS to war sufferers in Europe, or flood sufferers in China, or other sufferers on the planet Mars, if you can reach them.

But let your charity begin at home and let it continue at home as long as there are any poor to be found here, any worried mothers, any unhappy children.

A great many thousands of charitable women are knitting "woolen comforters," thick and warm. These comforters are to go across the ocean to England and across the Channel to the Continent, and there to "comfort" some soldier standing with a repeating rifle, eagerly trying to murder some other soldier.

Kind hearted women, are you not interested in any comfort save that of a man engaged in military murder?

If you go out in the streets by and by you will find plenty of little boys with blue faces and cold hands and very little around their necks. They are not trying to murder anybody, but they DO NEED COMFORT.

Why not try your "comforter" on one of them, the cold, suffering child that you can see, rather than send it to some vague, unknown man-killing hero across the water?

Of if you are making your comforter too long, thick and heavy for a child, see if you can't find some Christian man in the cold days, poor through no fault of his own, far from the patriotic excitement of the battlefield, struggling to make a living, or tramping ceaselessly looking for work.

There ARE sur men here in this country, you know. Nobody is writing poems about them, there is nothing romantic or exciting about them. They are only poor creatures suffering cold, hunger and anxiety.

Suppose, kind-hearted ladies and rich, charitable gentlemen, that Christ, whom you follow, were here in America. Suppose that HE had money or warm clothing to give. What do you think HE would do?

Would HE wrap the warm clothing in bundles, put the money in envelopes, send them three thousand miles away to some vague address, or would HE personally seek out the poor, find them and help them, as HE helped the woman that the mob would stone, or the man lying helpless, or the miserable leper?

We have war sufferers here, good, charitable people. For the man who is without work and the woman who cannot feed her children are sufferers, and the war that has disturbed the whole world is responsible for their suffering.

Why not help those whom the war afflicts in your own country, your own brothers and sisters?

Why must so many suddenly seek to give charity like the man in this picture and see only the misery three thousand miles away and not the suffering at home?

If you saw the man in the picture looking through his telescope for "deserving persons" you would tell him to turn around, look behind him and give the money in his pockets to the crowd at his feet.

Why don't you do what you would tell HIM to do?

The other day a woman jumped from the fifth story window—the highest point in a "cold-water tenement"—because she could no longer look at her children suffering for food.

Is not that romantic enough to stir your pity, or must you have shrapnel, bursting bombs and mutilated cathedrals to interest you?

The other day a woman with a young baby in her arms arrived at the door of a maternity hospital asking help. And while she waited the baby died. She hadn't a penny, and the policeman to whom she was referred said that the baby must go to the potter's field.

Can't that stir your imagination? Can you not share the emotion or at least sympathize with the sorrow of a poor, ignorant mother, who first sees her child die and is then told that the child must be buried like a dog in a ditch?

Or must you have trenches and armored automobiles and legs and arms blown in the air to arouse your interest and loosen your pocketbook?

A respectable woman unable to find work of any kind, forbidden by conscience to take her own life, sat quietly in a room, bare and forlorn, and there starved for six days. Then the ambulance took her away, but too late to save her life. She was a good Christian and would not commit suicide, which is a sin.

Don't you think it a pity that some other good Christian did not find for her some solution of her problem other than starvation?

Or do you feel that an ordinary woman in America who cannot find work and starves to death rather than beg is not sufficiently exciting or romantic to be worthy of help?

There are many things that prove the dull heartlessness of the human race. But of them all, few give such extraordinary proof as this hysterical, sensational, self-advertising outburst of "charity for Europe and nothing for the poor at home."

Americans are told that thousands of children in Europe whose fathers have been killed can have no toys for Christmas. And a collection of maudlin idiots gather together drums and trumpets to send to children whose fathers have been murdered. A nice drum may be a good substitute for a father in the estimation of a European child.

But what about the poor children at home? Hundreds of thousands of them will spend a dreary, disappointed day on December 25, unless some of the charity at least begins and ends here at home.

What do the charitable people of this country want? Do they want to buy excitement and sensation with their gifts?

Do they imagine that the paltry sums that they contribute will be appreciated or make any difference in Europe, where two millions of men will be killed before next Spring, and where a hundred of millions of dollars would be a mere drop in the bucket?

Is there no happiness in helping those near you, in seeing a smile take the place of sorrow, in knowing that your individual gift has given individual happiness?

Real charity is that which seeks out its object, or selects and knows the medium through which it gives.

And false charity is this thoughtless, hysterical, aimless impulse which sends what it has to give across the ocean, to be distributed by nobody in particular and received by no one in particular.

If a member of your own family were suffering, would you not be ashamed to help others first?

You would, of course. And as long as a man or woman in your own nation is suffering, as long as there is misery and want here, where you made your money, where you live, you should be ashamed to go abroad for your charity, because foreign giving is more exciting and more widely advertised.

Give at home until all of those at home are taken care of, and then begin shipping your money abroad.

By George Bernard Shaw

to despise of a character. You have to be a 'real gentleman' in the creation of a person of a prime importance. A gentleman cannot be a simple emperor. Were he to come forward and say, 'Ladies and gentlemen, in spite of my uniform I am a gentleman, and I am not a simple emperor, really I am just exactly like any of the real gentlemen in the world, I am not a simple emperor, I am not a simple emperor.' As a matter of fact, if I did, I could not be earning his money. I would be a simple emperor, and I would be a simple emperor. It is more virtuous than anybody else in the world.

people may be really said to cost more. If you get rid of the idea of what a man is worth if you regard him as our commercial system regards him, not as a man or a human being, but as a mere instrument of production, as a sort of human machine, which can be set to do a certain amount of work, you will find that the amount of social training. The shepherd—you need give him a little to eat and a dollar. Now if you are a sensible person and if you have the interests of the nation at heart, you will want to get the best possible bank directors and the best possible shepherd ing them, then you see the very great difference to the cost of one man and the cost of another. The cost of a man is not the same as the cost of a raphicker with valets and ladies' maids. You find a valet costs more than a scavenger, and a lady's maid costs more than a raphicker. A good deal more has to be spent on their food and their clothes. The valets and ladies' maids are a great deal more expensive than the scavenger. The King's valets, for instance, the King's valet would give notice at once if he were expected to live as poor as King Solomon lived.

There are many things, I am sure, on which you might have saved that money. I am sure I might point out to you that a valet requires the same roof to cover him that he requires to a large extent the same accommodation. And you cannot have a man made to fit a valet as you can to fit a scavenger. You only give him a pair of boots and a shirt and a coat and are ashamed to pay that kind of wages to a scavenger.

If you begin from the very beginning when they are babies, to train one as a bank director and another as a scavenger, you are not able to secure that end, because, since you cannot distinguish between the financial capacity and asphering capacity of the babies while they are babies, it is just as likely when they are grown up you will find that your bank director is full of the same old ideas as your looking after sheep and that your shepherd is a man with a remarkable financial capacity. Now if you want to get the best and most efficient sort of shepherds and the most efficient sort of bank directors, you must begin by which you can do it, and that is to give them both a first rate education and then employ them according to their aptitude. I most emphatically believe that in our existing state of society the largest sort of the people in this country are the best sort of people to be employed as shepherds. Of course, the commercial man, who knows this, says this is Utopian. He says

I can remember when I had something to do, I would go to the bank and make out a check for $3 a week, I got into trouble. I was told they were old men who could not get a job. I was told that if I was a young man, I should take advantage of their being old and give them $3 a week, especially as they were made an excuse for giving you a job. I was told that if I was a young man, I should take advantage of their being old and give them $3 a week, especially as they were made an excuse for giving you a job. I was told that if I was a young man, I should take advantage of their being old and give them $3 a week, especially as they were made an excuse for giving you a job.

"The idea of education is to make a person a person, not a clerk. The clerk does not require any education. I know that because I have been a clerk myself. And when I say, of course, 'no education,' I mean he only requires that there be no education. I mean that education is given to everybody. When you give a certain degree of education to everybody it ceases to be education at all. A man who knows as much as everybody knows is not educated at all. The education of a man is what he knows which the people do not know.

try, or to Italy, and explain when and why he did not name the Pope. Then, when he said that he was so popular as he thought, his hearers laughed and he said, say the sword is forced into my hand and that he is not a friend in a wide world. While it is probably the case that it is true, true as the Prussian style is apt to be awkward, even when the Prussian police are pacific, I know nothing more characteristic of a phrase which occurred in an excellent German article on an article urging the Germans to abstain from their outrages on ecclesiastics, art, and especially that a certain mediaevalism is something which is especially sacred because studies were made in it by some German whose name I cannot spell. I know nothing against or about the gentleman, but I think that by the time I had brought myself to act in entire contempt of the House of God and the history of Joan of Arc, the memory of the German gentleman would sit lightly on me.

There is this awkwardness in their very well-meaning efforts. They seem incapable even of apologizing without bragging. Although conciliatory attitudes are a great strain on them and are never kept up for long, they should not make us forget what it is on which Belgium to remember—that the first studies toward Belgium was, in form, conciliatory, and was kept up just long enough to have allowed Belgium to avoid her heroic trial had it not been for the Fountains of German battery who doubtless ran to flow for her if she had chosen to facilitate the German plan—however privately and negatively. In a sense she could not have saved her face; but she preferred to save Europe.

nothing to the so-called Federal Edition Nixolay and Hays' Life" yields nothing of the sort nor any of the biographies. He wrote "Lincoln's Speeches in Congress" and his name is on the title page.

Now, what is the history of the phrase "Lincoln's first speech on the tariff"? The very first mention which was made was in 1934 in the American Economic, a weekly publication, which was published in New York. In that periodical for June 29, 1934, the following is given as having been copied from the Independent, of Howard, Illinois, of June 9, 1859:

"Lincoln's first speech on the tariff was made in 1859, and to the point. He said that we are proud of our tariff, but we are not proud of the tariff we have, but he thought that he knew enough to show us that we were not proud of it. He said that an English manufacturer, America had the steel and England had the steel. He said that we had the steel and England had the steel. He said that we had the steel and England had the steel. He said that we had the steel and England had the steel."

In a later issue (October 25) of the American Economic of that same year, it is stated that the above is a "copy" of a speech given at Keokuk, Iowa, in 1859. It is still another "copy" of a speech given at Keokuk, Iowa, in 1859. This version was not at all "correct" and was not a "copy" of a speech given at Keokuk, Iowa, in 1859.

Mr. Mattoon reports that Howard appeared on the map until about 1902; since then a village has grown up and the name of the place is apparently is named "Loutz" on the map. It is a village of about 100 people, in Adams county, forty miles from Lincoln's early home at New Salem. Mr. Mattoon added "I am forced to the conclusion that the Howard Tariff dependent is a myth, or at least a misreading. The Postmaster at Lotus writes me that it appears has ever been printed; and there is no evidence that it was ever published. It is not possible to discover with which the name "Howard" is associated. No Howard Independence was published elsewhere in the United States during the period of the practices of 1890-1893-1895, and the last issue."

The first appearance for express publication appears to be in 1904. The phrase is to be found in the Register and American News Company's 1904 edition of Lincoln's tariff notes, pp. 482-486, 1900-1901, does not appear, although the phrase is used in connection with the subject of protection. Evidently the phrase was not widely known during these earlier years.

In the 1904 edition of the tariff notes, the word "tariff" is substituted for "Lincoln's tariff notes." On another occasion Mr. Lincoln is quoted as saying, "I am not posted on the tariff, but I know enough to buy one made by some man to buy a clock and see where one made in France is better than one made in America, and has the twenty dollars," while if he buys a clock made in the protected United States, he will get a clock worth fifty dollars."

Here, it will be observed, a clock "appears to have been made in France." In the House of Representatives, April 22, 1904, the words "and 'my wife' appear, with the same sense as above. This is the only instance of the book version of 1904 was taken from Mr. Lincoln's tariff notes.

In 1910 the phrase appears conspicuously in a booklet entitled "Story of a Tariff," published by the American Protective Tariff League, the organization which publishes the American Economist also. This booklet labels the tariff act of 1909 as "the best tariff bill since the tariff act of 1890." It contains a list of the quantity of extracts from speeches on that measure. On the inside cover page there is printed in large type "Lincoln's Tariff Creed." In these words:

"Secretary Stanton once asked Abraham Lincoln what he thought of a 'Protective Tariff.' Mr. Lincoln said: 'I don't know anything about the Tariff, but I do know that my wife buys her cloak in America, we get the money and the cloak, and that American labor gets the credit for it. If we export abroad, we get only the cloak, the other country gets the money, and foreign labor receives the credit for it.'"

It will be observed that this is somewhat untrue, but it is not the point. The point is that it is smuggled in; and not only is the money introduced, but Secretary Stanton also.

There is no evidence that Lincoln ever said "I don't know anything about the Tariff." There is no evidence that Lincoln ever said "My wife buys her cloak in America." How did he originate. Possibly the claptrap about the "goods and the money" was invented by some one else, and Lincoln was merely ascribed to him at an earlier date than the first here given. The "Protective Tariff" is a term to be associated with Lincoln almost as much as the cherry tree is associated with Washington. It is a part of the reasoning (if such it can be called), so vulgarly fallacious is the argument, that we must hope that it will not be associated with the apostle of a venerated name.

couldn't even find a hook to hang on. We crossed the campus and walked into some dormitory. And we just walked into a student's room and went to bed. Along toward the dewy dawn, about the time you reach down and pull the quilt up over you, two noisy youths crashed in, in high spirits, and spirits. They had been marauding, of course. One carried a couple of signs and another a young tombstone.
